The quote by Charles Dickens "Procrastination is the thief of time," collar him, eloquently captures the author's perspective on the detrimental impact of postponing important tasks. Dickens use of the metaphor of procrastination ~~is~~ ^{as a} the thief of time ~~collar him~~ ^{underscores} the notion that delaying actions can rob us of valuable opportunities and the ability to make the most of our time.

From my personal viewpoint, I agree with Dickens sentiments. Procrastination is a common affliction that can lead a multitude of problems, from missed deadlines to the accumulation of unfinished tasks. When we postpone or hesitate to tackle our responsibilities, we often end up in a state of avoidance, engaging in time-wasting activities that provide temporary gratification but ultimately hinder our progress.
